

CHILD KILLED BY FALL FROM HORSE

Ruth, Aged 13, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Loudon, Near Medora, Meets Violent Death.

LITTLE GIRL'S NECK BROKEN

Brother and Sister Were Also Riding Animal and Witnessed the Fatal Accident.

Ruth Loudon, aged thirteen years, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Loudon, who live near Wray's church, seven miles northwest of Medora, sustained fatal injuries, Sunday afternoon, when she fell from a horse.

The child's neck was broken, and death occurred almost instantly. The little girl, a brother, Lloyd, and her sister had gone to a field, some distance from the house, to bring the cows home. The three children were riding a horse and the girl slipped from the animal's back and fell to the ground, striking on the back of her head. The brother and sister, of course, were greatly frightened but hurried for assistance but the child died within a few minutes.

The girl was born in the vicinity of Wray's church and lived there during her brief life. Although she was an exceptionally bright child she was handicapped in her school work by defective eye sight with which she had suffered since she was a small babe. The girl was of a happy disposition and her death was a shock to her many friends.

This is the second death that has occurred in the Loudon family within a week. A few days ago Mr. Loudon's father, Christian P. Loudon, one of the best-known men in that vicinity, died after an illness of several weeks. Besides her parents, the little girl leaves two brothers and a sister.

The funeral will be held from the Wray church Tuesday afternoon. Burial at the cemetery near the chapel.

Blood poison developed several days later.

Mr. Ruddick was born in Jackson township and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Ruddick. He was one of the trusted employes of the Woolen Mills for thirty-three years. He was married to Miss Emma Davis August 8, 1896. He is survived by his widow, his mother, two children, Floyd and Estella, and one sister, Mrs. Edward Massman. He was a highly respected citizen and had many warm friends. He was a member of the Christian church.

The funeral will be held from the late residence on Lynn and McDougal streets, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with the Rev. W. H. Baker, pastor of the Christian church, officiating. Burial at Riverview cemetery.

ATTACKS NEAR BEER TRIAL LAST WEEK

Rev. F. A. Hayward Points to Admission of Guilt by Man Who Was Acquitted.

STANDS FOR OPEN CLEAN CITY

Liquor Business With Its Accompanying Evils is Outlawed in State and Nation.

Rev. F. A. Hayward, pastor of the First Baptist church, based his address Sunday evening on the result of the near beer trial in this city last week. He said: "Two important events occupied my mind in the week just closed. One, the splendid review of troops at Camp Taylor on Friday afternoon, the other the defense of an ex-saloon keeper in this city by a state senator and his colleague. The more I thought of the marvelous spirit of the men at Camp Taylor, rookies and officers, infantry and artillery, ambulance corps and bird men, the more pitifully weak the action of the state senator in his defense at this trial appeared. This seemed true because in the light of the unselfish and loyal American spirit shown by the boys at the camp, here is a state senator at one time casting his vote for a dry Indiana and promising the anti-saloon people they may depend on his vote at the time of ratification of state prohibition and then lending himself in this hour of great things to the defense of a man engaged in the sale primarily of brewery goods even though they may be termed dry beer, near beer, etc."

Mr. Hayward said that he had studied the situation carefully ever since the conclusion of the trial and had reached the opinion that it is the duty of reputable citizens and himself as a representative of the church to enter his protest against the proceedings during this trial. "The dry beer ordinance was passed in a

TO DISCONTINUE USE OF GERMAN IN LOWER GRADES

Lutheran School Opens Today With an Enrollment of 230 Pupils.

The Evangelical Lutheran Immanuel church at a special meeting held Sunday afternoon decided to discontinue the use of the German language in its parish school, the change to go into effect immediately in the lower grades. The classes having advanced beyond the lower grades will be given the opportunity of completing their course in religious instruction in the German language. Heretofore, all instruction in the Lutheran school has been given in the American language with only one exception, that of religion which was being taught principally in German, making it necessary to continue the study of German as a language. This however, will be discontinued as the upper grades complete their course.

The Lutheran school opened this morning with an enrollment of about 230 pupils.

A son of Ted Payne, who lives south of Brownstown, saw his little three-year-old brother walking through the lawn, apparently playing with something concealed in the grass. He walked over to investigate and found that the youngster was poking a snake with a two-foot stick. He looked closer and found the reptile to be a rattle snake which he promptly killed. The snake had nine rattles and a button.

FRENCH COLONEL INVOLVED

Private John Pfaffenberger, of This City, Among the Men Who Visit A Hive Abroad.

Private John Pfaffenberger, of this city, has written his mother, Mrs. John Pfaffenberger, relative to an interesting little encounter in which the Germans were not involved. He has always been interested in bees and while living here kept several stands, and this may account for the fact that he took part in the encounter overseas. Mr. Pfaffenberger entered the service several months ago and has been in France since June. He was formerly a fireman in the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio.

The story was printed in an American newspaper published in France and while Private Pfaffenberger's name was not mentioned in the article he states in a letter that he was present at the time. Don Martin, a correspondent for the paper tells the story thus:

Diplomatic relations between France and the United States were almost broken off recently by a half-dozen American soldiers acting in co-operation with a swarm of bees, cavalry horse and a French colonel. When it was finally explained that the bees were responsible for the whole thing and that further more

ENLARGEMENT OF AERIAL SERVICE

Secretary Baker to Give Attention to Aviation Branch on Second Trip to France.

RYAN AND HINES WITH HUN

Medical and Transportation Problems Are Also Under Consideration by Secretary.

By United Press. Washington, Sept. 9.—Improvement and enlargement of air plane, medical and transportation service will be undertaken as a result of Secretary of War Baker's second trip abroad.

With plans for a four million army by early summer of 1919 these services must be vastly enlarged. To this end, Baker, who is now in France has taken with him aeronautics director, Ryan, General Hines, Chief of Embarkation and General Gorgas, surgeon general.

Their stay will be indefinite but it is assumed that the secretary will return here despite renewed suggestions that he will establish semi-permanent headquarters for himself in France. In this connection it was recalled that President Wilson on Baker's first visit, wrote him a letter, expressing a hope for an early return. At the same time he expressed his full confidence in the war chief who was then under senatorial fire.

On this occasion, it is admitted that there is less reason for such message and hence Baker's stay may be longer than it might otherwise be.

Incidentally it is pointed out that Baker and Ryan will doubtless be able to return with much useful information to offset the senatorial air report; and the Hughes committee report which is likely to develop in their absence.

The presence of General Hines in the party is especially significant. "Turn around" and debarkation in France have been serious problems. With heavier shipments of men and supplies coming in the transportation situation will become increasingly important. In this connection it is recalled that war and navy officials recently surveyed the problem in the United States with a view to relaxing pressure on the over-burdened ports.

General Gorgas will review the nurse problem, medical attention and the general question of enlarging the medical service to meet the great demands of a four million army.

GERMANS FALL BACK TO OLD BRITISH TRENCHES

Defenses Built Last Spring Served Only to Stay, But Not Check German Drive.

By United Press.

With the British Armies in France, September 9.—The line of old British trenches north of the Somme served the German rear guard fighters to good purpose today. Built by the British when they settled down facing the Hindenburg line, these trenches served to stay but not stop the German steam roller last spring. It is likewise improbable that the Germans will do more than hesitate in the defenses before falling back to their own original positions.

A German concentration of heavy guns has been observed north of Craonne, on a line between Rheims and Laon, just above the Chemin des Dames.

CAPTURE WILL BE BLOW TO GERMANS

GAIN TOWARDS ST. QUENTIN

Germans Holding St. Gobain Forest, Another Key Stone Defense, With Great Difficulty.

By United Press.

The French are at the gates of LaFere. Cavalry patrols are close to the city. Fall of this stronghold of the Hindenburg line is probable. The city is still aflame.

French troops are now only four miles from St. Quentin. The Germans are holding St. Gobain Forest, one of the strongest defenses of Laon, only with difficulty.

The British are attacking Gouzeaucourt on the Hindenburg line, southeast of Havrincourt wood. British patrols have occupied Vermand, six miles northeast of St. Quentin. They have also reached the edge of Epehy.

Artillery fighting on the Arras-Cambrai road and at several other points on the front were reported by Haig.

South of Gouzeaucourt British advanced guards attacked today. At noon the assault was going well. Gouzeaucourt is on the Hindenburg line southeast of Havrincourt wood.

American artillery has opened a heavy bombardment of Le Petite Montagne, a powerfully fortified height, which lies 250 feet at the point where the German line leaves the Aisne and dips towards Rheims.

This height is the key position to enemy front in that position. American batteries, including many six-inch guns, are hurling hundreds of shells into the slopes and onto the crests, ripping up wire, searching ravines infested with machine guns which command the valleys on each side, battering the trenches to ruins and generally making the mountainous stronghold most unhealthy for the Germans.

German batteries behind the Aisne replied, bombarding Fismes, and the back areas, dropping high explosives over miles of country in their search for our positions. Simultaneously the American artillery with wonderfully accuracy, is smashing the Aisne bridges behind the Germans who are still on the southern bank of the river. Five bridges have been torn up.

The constant thunder of six inch guns was rolling over the battlefield as the American artillery lashed the battlefield with a terrific hail of shells. The Germans behind the Aisne replied, bombarding Fismes and the back areas, dropping high explosives hap-hazard over miles of country in their search for our gun positions.

Simultaneously the American artillery, with wonderful accuracy, smashing the Aisne bridges behind the Germans who are still on the southern bank of the river. As this was cabled five bridges have been torn up.

The enemy line from the Aisne southeastward across the crests of the plateau toward Rheims is much the same as it was Saturday. The Germans early today were holding with determination to the tops of the tableland. It is mainly the strength of LePetite Montagne, now being battered, which has slowed up the American advance toward the Aisne on the right of our line. A few more prisoners have been taken including five who hid out for the purpose of surrendering when our troops reached their places of concealment. One was accompanied by a trained messenger dog.

Awaiting The Joyful Sound

The Wonderful Music that Bursts Forth When the Stork Arrives.

Who can forget that little brassy cry that echoes the arrival of the new baby? Before baby comes the mother should get in condition to meet the crisis. Thousands of women have used the safe and reliable application, Mother's Friend, during the waiting months, and they relate how they entirely escaped nervousness, bearing down and stretching pains and many other debilitating and disheartening experiences which so illify the mother for the greatest time in a woman's life. Mother's Friend is a wonderful help to nature in relieving strain and distress brought about by expanding muscles. The nerves, too, will be calm, making the period one of cheerful days and restful nights. The breasts are kept in good condition and the abdominal muscles relax with ease when baby is born. Mother's Friend makes it possible for the expectant mother herself to actually aid nature in the glorious work to be performed and no woman should neglect or fail to give nature a helping hand. It will mean infinitely less pain at the crisis. Mother's Friend is for external use only. It is absolutely safe and wonderfully effective. It is prepared by the Bradfield Regulator Co., Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga. Write them for their "Motherhood Book," so valuable to expectant mothers. Procure a bottle of this famous remedy which has been used by women with the greatest success for over half a century from the drugist today, and thus fortify yourself against pain and discomfort.

itary service of this country is only 1.9 per cent. per thousand. This is considerably lower than the annual death rate for disease of men of military age in civil life which is 6.7 per cent. per thousand. These figures show that the army is giving first attention to the health of the men. When a new camp is established the medical corps sees to it that the sanitary conditions are the best and these are maintained up to a fixed standard at all time.

The new death rate from disease is based on an approximate strength of 2,500,000 men and includes those living under abnormal conditions. The Official Bulletin declares that the overseas record was made while American soldiers were participating in the heavy fighting in the Marne salient, when they were frequently compelled to sleep and eat under the most primitive conditions.

That this record is truly representative of the general health of the troops is shown by the combined reports, which indicate the figure of 2.8 per 1,000 as the average death rate for disease during the past two months.

An idea of the progress being made in military sanitation is gained by a comparison with the following:

During the Mexican War the annual death rate for disease was 100 per 1,000. During our Civil War the rate in 1862 was 40 per 1,000, while during 1863 the rate jumped to 60 per 1,000. The disease death rate for the Spanish-American War was 25 per 1,000.

As far as available records show, the lowest figure heretofore recorded was 20 per 1,000 during the Russo-Japanese War.

ATTACKS NEAR BEER TRIAL LAST WEEK

regular way by the city council, he said, was submitted to the Mayor and I understand it has his support. When sufficient number of the council passed the ordinance and the mayor did not veto it, it became the ordinance not of one councilman, not of a majority, not of the mayor, but of the city of Seymour, and as such the mayor, the city attorney, the police and all law abiding citizens were obligated to protect it and enforce it. This ordinance regulated the sale of Bevo, Pablo, and other drinks of similar character exempting milk, pop, coco cola, and soda fountain drinks which are now under state and federal sanitary regulations.

The ordinance affected every former saloon keeper now engaged in soft drink business, every wholesale dealer, druggists or other place of business handling these particular drinks. There was no attempt at partiality, he said. It was the cleanest challenge to the former saloon keepers of the city, whether they would comply with the law of the city, open up their hitherto closed places of business and come into legitimate trade.

An attempt at evasion of city authority was shown in the action of the former saloon men who are now handling soft drinks. They pooled their interest, financed their protection and made the defendant in this case the goat. When the case was called for trial the defendant on the witness stand admitted violating the city ordinance and demanded a jury trial. The speaker said that in his judgment the proper procedure where guilt was admitted would have been for the Mayor to fine the defendant in accordance with the ordinance and then let him appeal it if he wished to test its constitutionality to the circuit court where men accustomed to pass on legal questions could decide as to the constitutionality of the ordinance.

Mr. Hayward said the thing that interested him was that the state senator defended the case and secured the acquittal of a man who admitted his guilt. This was done in the face of his pledge to the district, and the state to uphold the law. Yet he accepts a retainer and publicly defends a man who admits violating a city ordinance. In his address to the jury he admitted that his client had no defense from guilt, but he argued the constitutionality of the law, disclaimed that this is a saloon fight and deplored that some interested citizens were acting as disturbers when they insisted on enforcement of the law.

The speaker said this case has attracted attention not only in this city, but throughout the state and even by the breweries in other states whose products are being sold. Here was a test case the city of Seymour versus the breweries and the breweries won through the defense offered by a state senator of Indiana. The city lost and is disgraced in the county, state and nation because from this time on it is advertised as countenancing an open, wet town.

The speaker said, I am interested in this case because I am interested in the enforcement of the law, because there are rumors, whether right or wrong, that bootlegging is carried on in Seymour, because of rumors that there are blind tigers and gambling shops here where as much as a thousand dollars in a night changes hands, that there are houses of prostitution running in this city, that there are pool rooms where minors are permitted to play, that there are sales of cigarettes, that there are gangs of uncontrolled minor girls. These rumors formerly associated themselves with the saloon and suspicion now is directed toward the men in their present business who refuse to come out in the open, take down their blinds and show to the world that they do a legitimate business. The liquor business is outlawed in the state and nation. It must be ruled out of this city and it will be when the men and women in Seymour are determined that their city shall be clean morally.

HERE'S A BEE YARN THAT HAS A STING

they were French bees, the storm clouds cleared away and France and her sister Republic went on living amicably together.

The desire of the Americans for some honey was the cause of everything that happened. I'll let one of the soldiers tell it in his own way. "Over here about twenty rods there are some beehives, and, being from Indiana, as we all are, we just sort of knew that about this time of year there would be some honey in the hives, and who doesn't like honey? So we put our gas masks on, wore gloves and started out to put one over on the bees. It was dead easy. They couldn't hurt us and they apparently discovered that fact after they had tried to bore through the gas masks.

"So what did the fool bees do. They started off. You know what bees do in a case like that. They swarm. Where one goes they all go and where they land they stick—and then they stick and keep on sticking. Well, about the time they started to buzz off by themselves along comes a French colonel on horseback. We didn't tell the bees where to go. But they had a fixed notion of their own and the leader landed on the tail of the colonel's horse. Then, as I explained, where one bee lands they all land and the tradition was strictly lived up to in this instance.

"You know how high forty feet is? Well, that's how high the colonel went. The last we saw of his horse, he was up on top of that hill. But you couldn't blame the horse. It was just those d—d bees."

INDIANA COLLEGES PLAN FOR MILITARY TRAINING

5,000 Hoosiers Expected to Enroll Under New Method Arranged by Government.

By United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., September 9.—More than 5,000 young men will be given military training in connection with their college work at various Indiana colleges and universities which open their fall terms this month, according to information gathered today.

Indiana University, which has postponed its opening until September 23 in order to make full arrangements for the military courses, will probably enroll the largest number. About 2,000 are expected to enroll for the military courses.

Students of 18 to 21 will be inducted into the army, according to war department plans, and then furloughed to various educational institutions where they will spend from three months to a year studying various courses approved by the government. They will get the regular army pay their board and housing.

Boys who had planned to go to school this year should proceed as usual, according to university authorities, and enter the college of their choice. They should also register for military service with their local board on next Thursday.

Within a few weeks an opportunity will be given to all registered men to be inducted into the Students' Army Training Corps at the school where they are attending. The war department will furnish equipment, including uniforms and rifles and send officers to train the men. Most of the colleges have revised their courses of study to fit in with the war department's plans.

Rose Polytechnic Institute at Terre Haute is constructing new barracks to take care of the army training students. Besides the regular students, about 200 vocational educational men will continue training at Rose Polytechnic this winter.

Three hundred student soldiers are expected at Franklin College and three hundred at DePauw. Fraternity houses are being taken over by the universities and colleges to provide quarters for the men.

Wabash has made arrangements to take care of 500 student-soldiers when the school term opens September 30. New barracks are being erected on the campus. There are 75 stars including five of gold, in Wabash's service flag now.

Co-educational classes will be conducted as usual at Purdue. About 1,200 are expected to enroll in the military classes.

Butler College will be changed into a semi-military, semi-academic institution and several hundred students will be trained for the army. The school year will be divided into three semesters, at the suggestion of the war department, in order that the men who are called for active service before a semester is completed will be given for work he has done.

DAIRYMEN OF THIS COUNTY
TO PICNIC SEPTEMBER 17

All Day Outing is Planned at the Farm of Frank Linke, South of This City.

A. D. Cobb, county agent, has planned a picnic for the dairymen of Jackson county on Tuesday, September 17. "Dairymen" for this purpose is defined by the county agent as anyone who milks a cow.

His letter relative to the outing is as follows:

An old saying often repeated, is to the effect that, "All work and no play, makes Jack a dull boy." You have been hard at it all summer, and pretty soon will come wheat sowing, silo filling and corn harvest. Now, how about a day of real good time and something different before the fall grind sets in?

Do you like picnics—the real old-fashioned kind? You know how it's done. The whole family comes along. We used to pack them in the old surrey or wagon, but now the Henry Fords do the job lots better and faster and give us more time for the fun. At noon everybody helps unpack the baskets, and say, but the fried chicken and pie and cake do fly.

Well, sir, that's just what's going to happen. We're going to have a picnic. "We" means all the dairymen of Jackson county and their families and friends. Do you milk a cow? If you do you're a dairyman, and you're coming to this picnic. Sure you are—you can't afford to miss it.

It's going to be held at Frank Linke's farm in Washington township, about a mile north of Dudleytown, on the Seymour and Dudleytown Pike, on Tuesday, September 17. When you come to the big gray barn and silo turn right into the front yard and you'll be there. Come as early as you can in the morning, so that you can look at the good barn and stables, inspect the Jerseys and don't forget the Soy Beans south of the house.

The big treat of the day will be the fact that Prof. Reed, the new head of the Dairy Department at Purdue, and Prof. C. R. George, secretary of the Indiana State Dairy Association, will be our guests for the day. After dinner Prof. Reed is going to tell us some of the possibilities of the future for the dairyman who stays with the game. Then we are going to borrow some of Frank's cows and have a judging demonstration.

Remember the date, Tuesday, September 17, early in the morning. Bring your wife and all the kids. Tell the neighbor about it and invite him to come along. Don't forget the dinner baskets. Hoover hasn't put a limit on fried chicken.

NEWSY PARAGRAPHS

Mrs. John C. Taskey has received word that her son, Sergeant John E. Taskey, has arrived safely overseas.

The Southwest Mission will hold its contest social at the Mission Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all members and friends to attend and enjoy the evening.

Harry Clark, of this city, a traveling salesman, is suffering from a severely sprained right arm. The injury was probably sustained several days ago when his automobile started to leave a slippery road and he jumped, falling on his arm. He is carrying his arm in a sling.

Miss Amelia Rodert, of Indianapolis, spent last week here with friends and relatives. She was joined here Saturday by her sister, Emma Rodert, and went to Cortland to spend Sunday returning here this morning. Miss Amelia Rodert returned to her home in Indianapolis today but her sister, Miss Emma, remained here for a longer visit.

Musican Kingsley Brinklow in a letter to Claude Carter states that he has secured a German helmet which he will forward to him in a short time.

D. V. Howard, of Waldron, was here today to begin a survey of the county for the Polk Milk Company, of Indianapolis, which is expecting to establish a milk depot here. He will be assisted by Mr. Delp, of Fortville. They will ascertain the number of milk cows in the county and upon their report will depend whether or not the station is located in this city.

John Owens, this morning, was found guilty of trespass by a jury in the mayor's court. The affidavit was filed several days ago by his divorced wife who alleged that he had annoyed her by coming on her property. She gave him notice, it was stated, and he failed to remain away. Owens was represented by A. C. Branaman, who announced that an appeal would be taken to the circuit court. John H. Kamman, deputy prosecutor, represented the plaintiff.

Notice to Milk Consumers.

The world war has combed the farms and other productive industries and drawn tens of thousands of men to the trenches and into the factories. This has caused advances in price that affect every man, woman, and child.

The farmer who a short time ago received $1.00 per bushel for wheat is now receiving $2.08. Cotton which a few years ago sold for 6c per pound now brings 36c.

The value of all farm products in the United States rose from $4,000,000,000 in 1904 to $21,000,000,000 in 1917.

The cost of milk is governed in just the same way as that of all other farm products. This means we must either advance the price of milk temporarily or go out of business.

We appeal to the patriotism and judgment of the people of Seymour to meet this situation in the same spirit we have been obliged to adopt. Do not stop using milk. Do not reduce your daily supply, milk at 12c a quart is the cheapest and best food you can buy.

A full statement of our condition has been submitted to C. H. Wiethoff, Food Administrator for Jackson county, and a committee, representing the consumers who have approved the new scale of prices and authorized them to take effect September 10. The new scale of prices will be as follows: Milk, quart 12c; milk, pint 7c; cream, pint 24c; cream, 1/2 pint 12c. This schedule will remain in effect until January 1, 1919. After this date the price will be governed entirely by conditions existing at that time.

A word about bottles. The price of bottles has advanced more than 100 percent. Patrons are urged to have an empty bottle in exchange for each bottle of milk delivered.

An extra charge of 5c will be made when bottles are not received in exchange. This rule is made necessary on account of the enormous loss sustained by not receiving bottles in exchange.

Very Respectfully,
Seymour Milkmen.

Capt. F. H. Statton, who was with the Canadian forces in France, will speak at Cortland tonight in the interest of the Liberty Loan drive.

NEW PREFERENCE LIST IS ISSUED BY WAR BOARD

Prescribers Industries That Shall Receive Basic Materials—
Key Also to Draft.

By United Press.

Washington, Sept. 9—The new preference list made public by the war board foreshadows a much more drastic curtailment of the lesser essential industries, officials declared today.

It definitely prescribes that industries shall receive basic materials, first in order of their importance in contributing to victory. No materials will be available for other industries until the needs of those accorded preference are fully supplied.

There are four great classes, the first embracing plants engaged in the more vital war work, such as aircraft, production and ammunition making. Class two includes copper, brass, locomotive steel, wire and kindred industries. Class three takes care of electrical equipment, food factories and a few others. Newspapers, tobacco plants and medical factories and others are included under class four.

The list will furnish a key to draft to officials for granting industrial exemption and determining whether a man is engaged in an essential pursuit.

"Key men"—the absolutely essential ones—will in some cases, be excused, officials say, but it is also predicted some dilution of labor will be necessary even in the more important plants. Men claiming exemption in these classes, must present affidavits of employers, setting forth that they are indispensable.

WHEN LIFE SEEMED GOOD

All Trials and Troubles Trivial to True American Under Such Glorious Circumstances.

I got up in the morning feeling out of sorts.

I was blue and depressed and had many troubles.

I was short of funds and long on obligations.

The coming cares of the day seemed to be too much for me and I dreaded meeting them.

I was in ill humor as I dressed.

Then I went to the front door and picked up the morning paper and I read:

"Yanks take twenty towns!"

"Yanks capture many guns and prisoners!"

"Yanks drive back the Huns!"

And I forgot all my troubles.

For life looked mighty good to me, —Indianapolis Star.

"Do you think so?" he replied.

"I'm glad you like it."

"I'm simply enchanted. Doesn't it make you feel as if you had stepped out of the everyday world into something strange and new?"

"Not a bit."

"What's the matter? You don't seem to be enjoying yourself."

Mrs. B. Had Been at the Jewelers on a Similar Mission Some Few Months Before.

Mr. Birkington drove up in a "taxi" and entered a jeweler's shop accompanied by his valet, who carried an oblong box of steel. Mr. Birkington asked for a private interview, and, on being shown into the office, he opened the box, exposing a splendid array of diamond and pearl necklaces, earrings, tiaras and rings. "Mrs. B.," he said, "is now abroad. Before she returns I want you to extract these stones and replace them with good imitations, selling the real jewels and giving me the money. This of course is to be a confidential transaction." "I should be glad to do as you ask," said the jeweler, "but two years ago Mrs. B. called here on a similar errand to that which now brings you and the errand in her case was successful. The paste jewels that you offer me are worth little more than the hire of the 'taxi' awaiting you outside!"

THE MURMANSK RAILROAD.

An American-built Road in the Arctic Which the Germans Will Find It Hard to Flank.

(From the Committee on Public Information.)

The allies are now marching into Russia from the north. They are already far south of Archangel, where our marines joined them. The Germans have again called upon Finland to move against them. Presumably, in any case the Germans themselves will try to attack. And, from the map, the new Murmansk railroad, paralleling the Finnish border as it does for almost its entire length, seems to offer the most vulnerable of open flanks.

But the Germans themselves know better than that. The Murmansk railroad is about as far as possible from being an open flank. And just now there is at least one man in America who is in a position to tell why. That is Vladimir Goriachkovsky, the big Russian engineer who built it. It was built in less than eighteen months when, after nearly two years of war, Russia found the absolute need of having an ice-free port on the Arctic. Goriachkovsky was chosen for the job because he was an engineer who had already solved many problems—his last work had been a railroad along the foot of the Altai mountains—and it was known that the Murmansk would be a road of many problems. And when it was planned and located never for a moment was it forgotten that it was a railroad which sooner or later might be a would-be object of attack.

But first, to look at it only as a railroad. It runs from Svanka, the main-line junction east of Petrograd, six hundred miles north to Kola. Its last two hundred miles is within the Arctic Circle, and Kola is the world's only arctic railroad terminus. To build the Murmansk in a year and a half—it was finished in November, 1917—100,000 men and 15,000 horses were put to work. And in one sense it is an American railroad. For it was built with American materials.

Three years before the marines reached the White Sea, our ships and our freight-handlers were going there with rails and construction machinery. When no pick would open the frozen ground, great fires were built to thaw it for brigades of American steam shovels. When it was found impossible to get supplies through from the south for the construction camps, America was drawn upon for the needed flour and bacon. And, from first to last, it was found possible to let everything rest and depend upon American business system. In this way:

When a railroad is to be built in record time, work must begin simultaneously along almost the whole line. And the tools and rails, the bridge work and supplies must be delivered as near as is in anywise possible to the particular section for which they are designed. Well, when the right-of-way was located, it was found that at various points on the road there were adjacent points on the coast of Kola Bay and the White Sea where it might be possible for ships to make a landing. If they could do it, and make their deliveries exactly as per a previously arranged schedule, whole months could be saved. And our ships did it. Despite German submarines waiting for them outside, and icebergs impeding traffic within, they made their deliveries as per schedule. Not a day was lost, nor a meal. The bacon and the steel arrived together. If the Murmansk now promises to be one of the most useful roads on earth,

America can claim at least a part of the credit for its being there.

But why can it not be flanked and cut from Finland? The answer lies in the nature of the country. It is absolutely wild and virtually impassable. It is much like northwestern Canada. There is the same amount of game. When our boys are not fighting, they can fish and shoot. There is the same lack of all roads. The sparse reindeer trails—reindeer sledged in the first French ammunition—are the best the German will find in that respect. From Lake Onega north there are the same lakes and marshes. For hundreds of miles indeed, the marsh belt between the railroad and Finland is virtually unbroken. "And a marsh," said Hannibal, two thousand years ago, "is of all things accursed in war!" Where,

ONE-MINUTE FOOD TALKS

By Don Herold

BY THE WAY

There are many minor INCIDENTS in connection with this war that are somewhat interesting. For instance, 4,750,000 persons have died of starvation in Europe since the war began. (The number killed in fighting has been about 4,250,000.)

There have been no moving pictures of this phase of the war. These 4,750,000 persons were no identification discs. There were no casualty lists of these 4,750,000. When THEY died, there was no boom, no puff of powder, no two-mile gains. They just died. They just died because they were hungry.

It didn't get much attention in the papers. Did? You didn't even know they were sick, did you?

But, now, maybe, by putting a ridiculous cartoon at the top of this article, perhaps the news can be PUT HOME to you. Perhaps for the first time.

The war is so nicely organized, we read so much about the science and system and efficiency of everybody that we get the feeling that the thing is all laid off neatly like city streets. It's hard to realize that 4,750,000 people have been let STARVE.

Mr. Hoover has realized it for several years. He has been fighting for them. He held starvation at bay, for ten million Belgians, for several years, before he was called to America. Now he has simply transferred his seat of action. He has come where the food IS, instead of staying where it ISN'T.

Here at home we've been cracking our conservation jokes and taking the "Food Will Win the War" statements with a grain of salt, and fussing a little about the bother of buying substitutes, but GETTING a plenty to eat — and 4,750,000 children and women and men have starved to death, in Europe!

Wonder if we haven't been too light and easy about this whole proposition of conserving food, after all?

in those Russian marshes, there are a few labyrinthine causeways, only the wolves seem able to thread them. And the wolves abound. To protect their horses and cattle in summer, the natives herd them on the islands found in the bigger lakes. And when, during the building of the road, certain German prisoners, used in the construction gangs, availed themselves of their working liberty to run for it, in general two days or at most three proved enough to bring them back again.

All this, however, is true only of the summer. In fact, south of Lake Onega it isn't true at all. What of the winter when solid ice should furnish road beds. In both cases the railroad is vulnerable. But, as will soon be seen, it is a vulnerability that needs give us little cause to worry.

The Murmansk is sub-arctic only in a geographical sense. The last reaches of the Gulf Stream modify the climate, and there is more snow than ice. On the large lakes the gradually accumulating weight of snow often forces the ice beneath the water, which cannot make for the best of military thoroughfares. Even in the marshes half the invading army would be kept busy digging out the other half. And finally, even if a German army did get through, it could stay only for the winter. From February to November its connection with its base would be severed absolutely. During the months of ice-sliding it might of course pile up supplies and munitions enough to carry it through the rest of the year. But under the strain and drain of modern fighting that is unlikely. Henceforward, too, the Prussian military imagination will probably be less sanguine than it previously has been.

So much for the regions north of Lake Onega. What of the country to the south of it? From Petrozovsk on the lake, the line continues south to Svanka, 114 kilometres east of Petrograd. Between junction and capital all is one open plain, and the Germans may now reach Petrograd at any time. Could they get across the Murmansk road from there?

They could not. For, again, extending miles below Lake Onega there are marshes. Furthermore, once we and the allies reach the lake, we shall no longer need rail transportation. From the eastern—the protected—side of Onega opens the first of Russia's great interior canals. Their huge steel barges have always been her main freight carriers. They are among those things which revolutions do not destroy. They are almost as numerous as America's coal and ore gondolas. And where the latter carry their fifty tons, Russia's barges carry a thousand. All are self-powered, too. They may be easily armed. The canals on which they move reach all Russia, from the Gulf of Finland to the Black Sea and the Caspian. We may yet read that Company—of the United States Marines got upon the enemy's flank with terrific effect by arriving suddenly at high speed in its armored barge, from the direction of Odessa.

FOOD CLUBS ENDURE THE TEST OF TIME

(By C. V. Stainsby, Assistant to Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana.)

The U. S. Food Clubs can endure the tests of the time. During the stress of war all our institutions are being judged by their natural relationship to the war program. Those things that definitely hinder our war activities are quickly put out of the way. The list of non-essential industries, that do not help is steadily being enlarged and more clearly defined. These industries are being either reformed or restricted. Public opinion is rapidly shaping itself to oppose any expenditure of energy or material except in the interest of winning the war. Individuals and communities that do not support the government's war program soon feel the disapproval of their neighbors. Some of the questions that we are all being required to answer in justification of our right to citizenship in this democracy are as follows: Are you supporting the selective service law? Are you buying Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps? Are you contributing to the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. and similar movements? Are you saving fuel? Are you supporting the U. S. Food Administration to the limit of your ability? It is easier to be a food slacker than any other kind of slacker because food is handled within the privacy of the home. For the same reason the food patriot is the truest type of patriot. One may purchase a Liberty Bond for the sake of appearances. Those who observe the food rules at home do so because they are loyal U. S. citizens.

It is impossible to sum up the whole food situation in one or two sentences. There are many phases to it. To observe the regulations fully we must put ourselves in a position to receive regular information from official sources. The U. S. Food Clubs offer the best opportunity for this enlightenment. They are being organized so that the Food Administration can communicate directly with the homes. They bring the housewives together so that they may discuss their problems and exchange ideas. They render a definite contribution to our war program. They are first essentials. They need not apologize for their existence. They place a stamp of loyalty on the individual members and on the communities in which they are maintained. Join a U. S. Food Club in your neighborhood.

SAVE SUGAR

OFFICIAL FOOD NEWS

By Dr. Harry E. Barnard, Federal Food Administrator for Indiana

Retailers, distributors or consumers who may have on hand a flour containing 20 per cent. or more of substitutes for wheat flour, may distribute the same without the addition of the additional 20 per cent. of substitute flours. Where any mixed flour contains less than 20 per cent. of cereals other than wheat it is the order of the Food Administration that one pound of substitutes be sold and used with each four pounds of wheat flour. Pancake and self-rising flours containing substitutes may be manufactured after September 1 only upon special permit from the food administration, at Washington, and after a permit has been obtained such pancake flour may be sold without substitutes provided it contains 20 per cent. or more of substitutes other than rye. Manufacturers of Victory mixed flours must take out internal revenue licenses as heretofore. The milling section of the Food Administration will continue to inspect mills to see that the proper percentage of substitutes is maintained in the new flour.

Outstanding sugar certificates expire September 30, and to make sure of a proper, prompt and equitable distribution for the succeeding quarter new statements must be filed by all users in classes C, D and E, which includes hotels, restaurants and public eating houses, bakeries and retail stores.

Changes in corn milling grades, affecting grits, cream meal, corn flour, pearl meal and common corn meals, are effective at once. The housewife may thus be sure, when purchasing, that she will always get the same grade under the same designation. The new grades will permit grits, cream meal and corn flour to have a moisture content of from 12½ per cent. to 13½ per cent. Fat content may range from 1½ per cent. to 2½ per cent., instead of being limited rigidly to 1½ per cent. In any case, the sum total of the two must not exceed 15 per cent. Standard, bolted and plain or water-ground common corn meal, when shipped in interstate traffic, must not contain more than 12 per cent. of moisture. It is to be unrestricted as to moisture or fat content if for local distribution. Pearl meal standards for moisture and fat, respectively, are now 12 and 3 per cent., whether domestic or export. The figures were formerly 11 per cent. for moisture and 3 per cent. for fat.

No extra allowances of sugar for the purpose of wine making, even for sacramental purposes will be permitted by the sugar division of the United States Food Administration for Indiana. Neither will individuals be privileged to buy extra amounts, as for canning, in order to make wine. Edward H. Stein, federal food administrator for Greene county, was advised that in all cases where it is desired to make wine for sacramental or religious purposes, the pastors are to be instructed to solicit contributions of sugar from members of their congregations, to be taken from their own home tables.

Emphatically Asserts Worn Out, Lagging Men Can Quickly Become Vigorous and Full of Ambition

7 A DAY FOR 7 DAYS

Don't blame the man who is perpetually tired; his blood needs more red corpuscles and his brain and nerves are craving for food.

Given the right kind of medicine, any tired-out, inactive, lagging fellow can quickly be made into a real live, energetic and even ambitious man.

So says a student of the nervous system who advises all men and women who feel worn out and who find it hard to get up ambition enough to take a regular job to get a package of Bio-feren at any druggist. This is the new discovery that pharmacists are recommending because it is not expensive and speedily puts vigor and ambition into people who despaired of ever amounting to anything in life.

People whose nerves have been wrecked by too rapid living, too much tobacco or alcohol, have regained their old-time confidence and energy in less than two weeks. No matter from what cause your nerves went back on you; no matter how run down, nervous or tired out you are, get an original package of Bio-feren at once. Take two tablets after each meal and one before bedtime—seven a day for seven days—then one after each meal till all are gone.

Then if you still lack ambition; if your nerves are not steady and you haven't the energy that red-blooded, keen-minded men possess, your purchase money will be gladly returned.

Note to Physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren, it is printed on every package. Here it is: Lecithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Peptonate; Manganese Peptonate; Ext. Nux Vomica; Powdered Gentian; Phenolphthalein; Oleoresin Capsicum; Kola.

CHAPTER VII.

Facing the Music.

Tommy woke next morning to the appropriate mental and physical tortures. When memory had finished with her rack, the future applied thumb-screws. If he went down to breakfast, he must meet—her. Remorse and jealousy struggled in him with a perverse pride. At any rate, he would not run away. No, he would face her. He would look into her eyes, which would be shocked and hurt. The last embers of a ruined existence would shine through his own. Then, after she had seen and realized, he would go away forever and send her just one letter—no, just one flower with his card—to let her know what he had felt and what he had cast aside.

Then—since the human spirit is never static—having touched the lowest depths, his thoughts began to rise toward hope. Just how had he behaved last night? What had she seen him do? From the haze of confused memories, a clear fact appeared in this place and that. He had been aware of her standing at the landing. How had she looked? Somehow, he could not remember her face. Why? Because he had been looking at her shoe buckles—at something which glittered—why—

The tragic night of the Hanska murder flashed in upon him, and with it a fact which he had told neither the police in the third degree process nor yet the coroner at the inquest, for the simple reason that he had forgotten it. Now, he remembered it clearly, perfectly. A freak of drunken consciousness had brought back something which he might never have remembered again.

"Gee whiz!" he cried, leaping out of bed, headache and all. "She's looking for evidence—this will fix her!" A cold dip and a dash of bromide restored him wonderfully, for the tissues of Tommy North were resilient and young. As he entered the dining room for breakfast, only a slight pallor and a little languor indicated the crisis of the night before.

Betsy-Barbara and Constance were already seated. Betsy-Barbara looked him full in the eye.

"Good morning, Mr. North," she said evenly.

"Good morning," replied Tommy North, and he slid into his chair and attacked his grapefruit.

The breakfast went on. Betsy-Barbara talked freely; she appeared animated even. She included Mr. North in the conversation, throwing him a question now and then. He noticed, however, that these questions came only at regular intervals, as though she were remembering to be very careful. That might be a good sign or it might be a bad one, he could not decide which.

Betsy-Barbara and Constance had risen now. Tommy North, with an effort of the will, rose and followed.

"Miss Lane," he said in the hall; and then, since she did not seem to hear him, he spoke louder, "Miss Lane."

Betsy-Barbara turned. Alone with him now—since Constance had gone on—her eyes showed the emotions which she had suppressed in public.

"What is it?" she said icily.

"I wanted," said Tommy—"I wanted to tell you something."

"I think," responded Betsy-Barbara, "that you needn't make any more explanations—thank you!"

She was turning away when Tommy recovered himself.

"Oh, it isn't that," he said. "I can't explain that, of course. I'm not trying to explain that, Miss Lane. It's just something—something new in the line of evidence—about the Hanska case—I think it may help."

Betsy-Barbara turned again—and this time quickly. Her look was startled—but—heaven be praised—friendly.

"Something new?" she said, breathlessly. "Oh, you angel fresh from heaven! Shall I send for Constance?"

This was the point where Tommy North became a strategist.

"It has to do," he said humbly, "with the way I was last night. You saw me—I shouldn't like to tell her."

"Let's take a walk," proposed Betsy-Barbara, with her wonderful practicality.

"If you wish," said Tommy North humbly, and yet thrilled with a sense of renewed companionship. Indeed, by the time they reached the street, he had recovered his spirits so much as to propose because the street was so noisy, that they take a cross-town car and walk up Fifth avenue. The car was crowded; they must stand; so they did not approach the subject of the moment until they were treading the street of the spenders.

"Well, what is it? I'm dying to know!" said Betsy-Barbara, the instant they reached the avenue.

"Did I do anything strange," inquired Tommy, "when I first saw you last night?"

"You nearly tumbled at my feet, for one thing," replied Betsy-Barbara.

"What—what were you wearing on your feet?"

Betsy-Barbara thought a second on this peculiar question.

"My velvet slippers with the rhinestone buckles," she said.

Tommy nodded solemnly.

"That was it—I was reaching for them last night—just as I was reaching for something the night I fell at Captain Hanska's door. And it brought everything back."

"Oh, what do you mean?" begged Betsy-Barbara. "Go on! Please go on."

"I had got to the head of the stairs on the night of the murder," said Tommy. "The gas was lighted in the hall. I was picked. You know how your mind gets on a little thing when you're picked—"

"I don't," put in Betsy-Barbara, in spite of her interest in the story—"but please go on."

"And I saw something bright in the hallway," close to Captain Hanska's door. I braced against a post and looked at it. It was a cluster of diamonds—the more I think of it, the more it seems like that shoe buckle of yours. I reached out to get it. Then I tumbled and hit—the stuff. The tumble and the sticky feeling put diamonds out of my mind. But I'm sure, just the same, that I saw a bunch of diamonds or something beside that door. You've asked me to tell you anything I might find about the Hanska case. And I'm telling, that's all."

Betsy-Barbara considered.

"It may not mean anything," she said, "and it may mean a good deal."

She considered again. "Even if the diamonds were there, maybe it had nothing to do with our case. If anybody had been robbed that night, if there had been any signs of a burglar, this evidence would be very important. But the police say that the house wasn't entered. Then again, what became of the diamonds? It seems no one else noticed them."

"Well," remarked Tommy North cynically, "there were a great many policemen in the house."

Betsy-Barbara walked on, still thinking. "Maybe. I'm afraid, though, that it might be only an aberration," she said finally.

"Perhaps," echoed Tommy North. And now, having finished his introduction, he approached the subject nearest his heart.

"Of course, that's all," he said, "except that I owe you an apology for—my condition last night."

"It is to yourself," said Betsy-Barbara, "that you owe the apology. Mr. North, why did you do it—again?"

Now it was in Tommy North's impulses to tell exactly why he did it—to come out with the truth, accompanied by his opinion of phillandering Spaniards. But that would have amounted to a declaration; and to declare his feelings for Betsy-Barbara was leagues beyond his present courage.

"Oh," he said, carelessly, desperately, "I got a jolt. That's all. And I took it out in booze."

"You told me the other night it was because you hadn't anything better to do. Mr. North," she added, suddenly lifting her blue eyes to his, "I'm going to ask a very personal question. I'm not asking it for curiosity. I've a reason, which I'll state later—have you saved any money?"

"Brace yourself for the shock," replied Tommy, "but I really have. I inherited three hundred dollars a while ago. And my mother made me promise one thing—that I'd save a little every week. I have five hundred dollars in the bank."

Betsy-Barbara nodded her wise and golden head.

"That will do beautifully for a start," she said.

"A start at what?" inquired Tommy. "At the Thomas W. North Advertising agency."

"At—"

"The Thomas W. North Advertising agency. Its founded now, 10:15 a. m. October sixteenth, at the corner of Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, New York!"

"This is so sudden!" exclaimed Tommy. But his heart leaped and danced.

"Now, see, Mr. North," resumed Betsy-Barbara, "I've diagnosed your case. The trouble with you is that you've drifted. You need responsibility. When you're boss, you won't be loafing on the job. You'd discharge an employee who did that—and you can't discharge yourself. Some day you'll wish you had a business of your own. Then you'll look back and be sorry you didn't start it when you were young. You can get business, can't you?"

"I ought to," said Tommy.

"And you can—fix up—the business when you get it?"

"I suppose I can. I never lost a place for incompetence."

"Then there's really nothing more to be said," responded Betsy-Barbara. "Just get an office, and hang out your shingle, and go to work. You may fail, of course. But you'll be doing it for yourself, and that, Thomas W. North, is what you need."

Tommy North had been looking at her as one who sees visions and hears voices. "Why, that's the way I used to think. That's the way I used to talk," he said. "I didn't realize until I heard it from you, how I'd got over it."

"The first thing to do when you're starting in business is to find an office," said Betsy-Barbara practically.

"There are lots of good cheap little places in lower Fifth avenue," said Tommy North.

"Let's look at them right now!" exclaimed Betsy-Barbara. And the newly-formed Thomas W. North Advertising agency wheeled and started southward.

That afternoon, Betsy-Barbara and Rosalie Le Grange were sewing together in the sun parlor. As they pulled bastings, Betsy-Barbara slipped in a remark which she tried artfully to conceal in general chatter.

"Mr. North tells me," said Betsy-Barbara, "that he is going to start in business for himself."

"That so?" exclaimed Rosalie; "well he's a nice, smart young man an' it will be the very best thing for him." She pulled bastings for ten seconds before she resumed:

"It will keep him straight. He won't have to be helped up to his room for some time, I hope."

Betsy-Barbara stared and flushed.

"Oh! Did you see it?"

"Now, my dear, I think it was brave an' nice of you. It's what any girl should have done, an' it's what most good girls wouldn't have the decency to do. No woman's a real lady when she's too much of a lady. Yes—I heard him stumble, an' I come out an' looked."

"I—I just opened his door and pushed him in," said Betsy-Barbara, blushing furiously.

"An' quite enough—I saw that, too." Rosalie pulled bastings for a quarter of a minute more. Then she added, "I suppose you called him down all he needed when you took that walk this morning."

"Oh, that wasn't the reason!" cried Betsy-Barbara, driven back on her maiden defenses. "It wasn't that. I really didn't want to see him. But he had something new to tell me about—the case—or thought he had. Something he'd forgotten—something which came back to him last night when he was—well, you saw." And detail by detail she repeated Tommy North's story about the diamond cluster. Rosalie, as she listened with downcast look, used all her will to keep her head steady and her fingers busy.

"That's interesting," she remarked, in a matter-of-fact tone, when Betsy-Barbara had finished. "But I don't know it's important. They think they see funny things when they're drunk an' they're ready to swear to 'em when they sober up. Intend to tell Mrs. Hanska or the lawyers about it?"

"I thought I might—I'm doing every last thing to help."

"Well, the evidence of a drunk wouldn't go at all in a court of law," pursued Rosalie, her eyes still on her work. "Mr. North is pretty humiliated already, an' he's a nice young man, an' he'll probably cut out drink now he's in business for himself. Still, if you think it's your duty—"

"Oh, I hope you think it isn't," said Betsy-Barbara. "I don't want to put Mr. North in that position, again."

"Can't see where it's the least bit of use, an' 'twould only do Mr. North harm," replied Rosalie. "If you was me, would you french this seam? Yes, I guess it looks more tasty that way." Rosalie turned the conversation to a discussion of autumn fashions. She sewed and chatted for ten minutes. Then she looked ostentatiously at the clock.

"Gracious! A quarter to four an' I must be down-town quarrellin' with that laundry at a quarter past!"

She rose, gathered coat, hat and gloves, and hurried to the corner drug store, from which she made by telephone an immediate appointment with Inspector McGee. They met in Abingdon square, a rendezvous half-way between her house and headquarters. She proceeded to business at once.

"I've been jest settin' on this Hanska case, inspector," she said. "Knew if I waited long enough, somethin' would hatch. It has, but I can't say yet whether it's a rooster or a duck. In the first place, when's the grand jury goin' to get to the Wade indictment?"

"Pretty soon, I guess. I've been holding them off until I get more evidence."

"Well, keep holdin' 'em off."

"Honest, what have you got?"

"Wouldn't you like to know?" Here Rosalie broke out all her dimples, so that Inspector McGee smiled on her. "Call it a hunch from the spirits."

"You can't come that on me," said the inspector, half playfully, "I know your kind of spirits."

"Well, call it a woman's notion then, if you like that any better. The grand jury's the first thing. Next, that old house of Mrs. Moore's is still vacant, isn't it? I want to go through it with you from top to bottom—an' I've got to do it so I won't be seen."

"That's easy. We can enter the block from the other side and go in by the back door."

"All right. How's two o'clock tomorrow?"

"Fine."

"Now I'd better run along. I don't want to take any chances of being seen with you."

"Honest, what have you found?"

"Honest, I don't know myself!" said Rosalie Le Grange, dimpling over her shoulder as she walked away. McGee stood following her with his eyes.

Air Raid Stories.

In a booklet recently published the Bishop of Stepney tells some amusing stories of the behavior of poor people in the East end of London during the raids.

One woman dwelling in a big block of model dwellings (writes the author) said to me, "You see, we're quite safe, because all here are contrite"— a fine frame of mind, only she meant concrete.

Another woman, a riverside dweller, who caught sight of a Zeppelin when she was out in her back yard in one of the earliest raids, said: "So I runs into me kitchen, and in a minute or two I looks out at the front door, and blest if it wasn't waiting for me there.
 I don't call it natural."—Pearson's Weekly.

WOULD AMEND LORD'S PRAYER

Seemingly Nothing Was Sacred From Revising Mind of This United States Senator.

A well-known senator annoys his colleagues sometimes because in his desire to make legislation thoroughly good he insists on many amendments.
 During discussion in committee recently, this senator, whose name is not Brown, insisted on amending and amending, practically without end.
 Finally, somewhat exasperated, a colleague said to him, "Brown, I believe if the Lord's prayer were being discussed here, you would want to amend it."

Brown replied:
 "Yes, I would. I would change the clause 'Lead us not into temptation' to read 'Give us strength to resist temptation.'"
